Art Unit: 2157

9. Claims 6-8, 10, 16-17, 20, 26-27 & 30 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by the article of “Visto launches mobile communications platform”.

10. As to claim 6, the article teaches a method for automatically transferring information (an address of an email) from a website (email account site) displayed on a handheld Internet appliance (web enabled device) into a local database in the appliance, the method comprising:

- determine the information (an address of an email) to be transferred with a web site application program interface (email application program interface);
- selecting a plurality of options available on a web site user interface (the appliance interface with the suite of applications) for transferring the information (an address of an email) to the appliance, to save (store) the information (address) into a local application (address book), and to launch a second web site (driving directions web site); and
- automatically transferring the information (address) into the local database using a software plug in which format conversions are taken place independent from a synchronization operation. See page 1, last paragraph (Powered by Visto), and page 2, lines 1-13.

11. As to claim 7, the local application comprises the address book application and the option for saving the information comprises saving (storing) an address into the address book application, see page 2, lines 1-13.

12. As to claim 8, the options include launching a second web site, see page 2, lines 1-13.

Art Unit: 2157

Therefore, it can be seen from paragraphs 10-13 that the article anticipates claims 6-8, 10, 16-17, 20, 26-27 & 30.

14. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
